The Diamer Bhasha dam project to be built in Gilgit Baltistan has been in the pipeline for several years. For a number of reasons, the project has been mired in controversy. The site of the dam project is located in a disputed region claimed by India and, therefore, has faced immense challenge while trying to rope in funds for construction. While many in Pakistani establishment had given up hope on the project considering the high cost of over USD 14 billion, the inclusion of the project in the North Indus Cascade, a cluster of dam projects to be built with Chinese funds, has brought a glimmer of hope amongst various stakeholders. Before this, there were widespread conjectures on whether the Diamer Bhasha dam will be subsumed in the China Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). Since the budget of CPEC was humungous, initially close to around USD 46 billion, it was hoped that the controversial Diamer Bhasha dam project may be revived if partial funds from the CPEC budget are allocated towards building it.

However, since China has announced a separate funding of over USD 50 billion for the North Indus Cascade, and that the Diamer Bhasha dam is a part of it, it seems funds for the much delayed project should not be a problem. China is well aware that the World Bank refused to give funds for the Diamer Bhasha project and the Asian Development Bank (ADB) cited anomalies before refusing to fund it. However, China in sync with a brazen pattern of hurting India's sovereignty related sensitivities, has yet again announced its support for the project as part of the North Indus Cascade. As one of the reports in the current issue indicates, the Chinese side is well aware of the Indian reservations on the said project and, therefore, has reportedly suggested that the reference to Diamer be dropped from the project's name. Instead what is being suggested is that the project be referred to only as Bhasha dam. Since Diamer district, where the reservoir of the dam is being made, is located in disputed Gilgit Baltistan, the Chinese side feels that dropping its mention in the project nomenclature will dilute India's objections on the dam construction. If such reports are true, it is at best another attempt by the Chinese side to trivialize a rather complex issue. India has a legitimate claim over the entire state of Jammu and Kashmir including PoK and to think that merely making changes in the nomenclature will diffuse India's claim, is further underestimating the seriousness of India's position on issues concerning PoK.

Arhama Siddiqa, “Gilgit-Baltistan Region: An indispensable part of CPEC”

Pakistan Observer, June 10, 2017

The Gilgit-Baltistan region is a part of the erstwhile Jammu and Kashmir, which was divided between India and Pakistan, and is directly ruled from Islamabad. It does not enjoy the constitutional status similar to, for example, the Punjab province, which has representatives in the Parliament of Pakistan. Pakistan has been deliberating on whether to elevate the constitutional status of northern Gilgit-Baltistan region in a bid to provide legal cover to the multi-billion-dollar Chinese investment plan – the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). This move could signal a historic shift in the country's position on the future of Kashmir region. The multi-billion dollar Chinese investment merits legal cover on an urgent basis for the greater long-term interests of the entire region. CPEC may very well provide the impetus for the whole nation to be on the same page for once. Although there are legal hurdles that block the process of development of reforms in this disputed region, the issue has also been projected negatively by the Indian media. For example, the videos posted by the Indian media that depicted protestors on the streets of Gilgit-Baltistan were not genuine rather they were clips of protests that were carried out after the Hazara killings in the year 2013. This is one of the many reports that the Indian media outlets have released whose only aim seems to be undercutting the progress of CPEC in Pakistan. Such negativity can be perceived as interference and, more worryingly, as an attempt to sabotage the process of development in Gilgit-Baltistan.

“Haider wants AJK included in NFC Award”

The Express Tribune, June 18, 2017

Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) Prime Minister Raja Farooq Haider expressed hope that the territory will be included in the National Finance Commission (NFC) Award as promised by the federal government. Speaking on the floor of AJK Legislative Assembly on June 17, Haider noted that Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had assured that AJK would be included in the NFC Award along with the Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FATA) and Gilgit-Baltistan, during a meeting of the Council of Common Interests in May 2017. The AJK PM stated that former Sindh chief minister Qaim Ali Shah had deferred AJK’s demand for provision of drinking water of 614 cusecs from the Mangla Lake for the people of Mirpur, arguing that the status of AJK was different from the four provinces of the country. “Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif has promised to increase water usage charges to Rs1.10, and the matter is lying with the Water and Power Development Authority and the Finance Division of Pakistan,” he noted, adding that Federal Minister Khawaja Asif promised to resolve the matter very soon and a meeting was all set to take it up.

Ghulam Abbas, “Pakistan may change name of Bhasha Dam”

Pakistan Today, June 19, 2017

China reportedly asked Pakistan to change name of the much-delayed Diامر Bhasha Dam to avoid rising Indian objections on the mega projects under the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), being initiated in the Gilgit Baltistan region. According to sources, Chinese side negotiating for the investment of $15 billion on the mega projects wants the name of the dam as Bhasha Dam excluding the name of Diامر, a district of Gilgit Baltistan to avoid ‘reservations’ related to the Kashmir issue. The condition of the change of the dam’s name is being taken an ‘easy’ task by Pakistan despite the fact that entire dam is designed to be constructed in Diامر while power houses of the project in Bhasha, a part of the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province. A source familiar with the development noted that China has agreed to fund the project but asked Pakistan to ensure that no local or international dispute should be attached with the mega project. “In official meetings, the Chinese side usually refers the dam as the Bhasha Dam instead of its full name,” he noted. However, official sources at the Ministry of Planning and Development could not be contacted for comments. The change of the name in papers may be strongly objected by Gilgit Baltistan especially residents of Diامر who are already demanding royalty of the project. According a retired bureaucrat of the area, this will be highly unjustified move if identity of the area is hidden despite their sacrifices by vacating their homes and native land/properties for the dam in the larger interest of the country. “The national interest was not given due importance by others in Kalabagh Dam’s case,” he noted.

“Legislators in AJK want development funds monitored”

The Express Tribune, June 19, 2017

A general debate on the budget for the fiscal year 2017-2018 in Azad Jammu and Kashmir Legislative Assembly (AJKLA) continued on June 18 despite being a holiday as the House put the rule in abeyance to conclude it before the Eid ul Fitr holidays. The legislative Assembly met at lodging hall on second consecutive day with speaker Shah Ghulam Qadir in the chair to debate the budget. Treasury member Pir Ali Shah Bukhari while participating in the debate stated that the budget announced by the government for next fiscal year was balanced and people-friendly which would boost development in the region. Opposition member and PTI leader Dewan Ghulam Mohiuddin also appreciated the raise in development budget but stressed upon the government to utilise funds for real development projects so as to benefit the general public without any discrimination. He stressed the need for placing an effective monitoring system on the spending of development budget and development projects for better result to attain the requisite objectives.

Haider Ali Sindhu, “China offers inclusion of Diامر-Bhasha project in CPEC”

Pakistan Mail, June 20, 2017

The government of China offered Islamabad to include the 4,500MW Diامر-Basha dam project under the umbrella of multi-billion dollars China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). The offer was confirmed by Water and Power Development Authority (Wapda) Chairman Muzammil Hussain on June 19 who told the National Assembly Standing Committee on Planning, Development and Reform that the project was pending due to Asian Development Bank’s refusal to provide funds in 2016 saying the project was located in a disputed territory. He stated currently no mega-hydel project was included in CPEC, therefore, governments of Pakistan and China were seriously mulling over including the Diamer-Bhasha project in CPEC. The official expressed that PC-1 of the project had already been completed and 85% land acquisition had also been made by the government. However, fund allocation for the project, which needed around $14.49 billion, was a serious issue. The Wapda chairman told the committee that other hydel power projects including Neelum-Jhelum and Tarbela extension would be completed by May 2018, which would provide an additional 2,500MW of electricity. “This is a multi-purpose project, which will not only provide electricity and water for irrigation but will also supply drinking water to Peshawar in addition to mitigating the danger of floods in Nowshera,” he noted.

Fawad Yousfzai, “Slow progress on Bhasha dam worries MPs”

The Nation, June 20, 2017

While pointing towards the slow progress of work on Diamer-Bhasha dam, a member of the parliamentary committee stated on June 19 that so far only one mosque has been constructed at the site of the reservoir. The National Assembly Standing Committee on Planning, Development and Reforms also asked the Ministry of Planning to provide the complete list of the PSDP funded projects as majority of them, including CPEC support project, are working without the permanent project directors. The committee, met under the chairmanship of Abdul Majeed Khan, discussed the issue of hiring full time project directors for the PSDP funded project and issues related to Bhasha Dam, etc. The Ministry of Planning, Development and Reforms Secretary informed the committee that the independent project directors would be appointed for those projects which are approved by Executive Committee of National Economic Council (Ecneec). The Ecneec only approves the projects that are worth more than Rs3 billion which means it is unlikely that the planning ministry is going to hire fulltime project directors for majority of its PSDP funded projects. The committee recommended that the ministry may provide a complete list of the project directors to the committee for its perusal. It is pertinent to mention here that out of more than 33 PSDP funded projects of the planning ministry, 80 percent are without fulltime project directors.

Panic gripped Passu Valley in Upper Hunza as Gilgit-Baltistan Governor Mir Ghazanfar Ali Khan’s son Salman Khan fired in the air for “almost 20 minutes”. People protested against the incident in strongest terms and pressed the GB government to take action against the ‘culprit’. Hunza is considered one of the most peaceful areas in Pakistan. The valley, home to most educated people in the country, is visited by thousands of tourists, both local and foreign, every year. Such incidents are very rare in Hunza. Seeking anonymity, a GB Information Department official noted that no action has been taken against Salman so far. He added that several tourists were also present on the scene when the Governor’s son opened fire in the air. When contacted, a police official stated the Governor’s son was testing his guns. He added that the people have filed a complaint with the police, but no first information report was lodged until the filing of this report. Salim Khan, the Governor’s elder son, a member of legislative assembly, wrote on his Facebook page, “I would like to officially clarify that 20 mins of indiscriminate aerial firing took place in Passu, Gojal by Prince Salman Khan; youngest son of the Governor Gilgit-Baltistan Mir Ghazanfar Ali Khan. He was accompanied by police official escort along with female companions (some of foreign origin)... I have asked the administration to take full legal action against this unlawful incident. Due process of law should prevail.”

Mohammad Irfan, “The Gilgit-Skardu Road an inevitable need for Gilgit-Baltistan”

ARY News, June 29, 2017

Baltistan region comprises four districts, which is home to half the population of the de-facto province of Gilgit-Baltistan. The region connects with Pakistan and the rest of Gilgit-Baltistan through the Skardu-Gilgit highway. The 167 KM road was built for the first time in the early 1970 and completed in 1982. Since then, the road has not been renovated and it is now in a poor condition, fatal accidents and landsliding are a routine phenomenon. Number of cars and other public transports had fallen in the mighty Indus River flowing just parallel to the road but deep in the mountain along this dangerous road causing loss of many important human lives every year. In the rainy season the road is often damaged due to land sliding from the mountains. The road is also of great importance from the security point of view, as the most sensitive borders of the country; Kargil, Siachen, Batalik and Chourbat borders are located in this region, where thousands of security forces are deployed for the protection of the homeland.

MA Mir, “Budget AJK 2017-18: Development expenditure doubles in Rs94.41b budget”

The Express Tribune, June 16, 2017

The Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK) government on June 15 unveiled a Rs94.41 billion tax-free budget for the fiscal year 2017-18. The budget was presented by AJK Finance Minister Dr Najeem Naqi during the budget session in the AJK Legislative Assembly. A major chunk of the budget, over 75 per cent or Rs71.13 billion, would be spent to meet non-development expenditures of the ministers, secretaries and other government employees in an area smaller than the Chitral district of Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa. This is up by 15.66 per cent from the Rs61.5 billion non-development budget last year. Curiously, this year’s non-development budget is almost equal to the region’s total budget for the fiscal year 2016-17. The large allocation has been made in light of proposals to give a 10 per cent raise to serving and retired employees of the region. The minimum wage in the region has also been increased to Rs15,000 per month. The government has also set aside Rs741.71 million for relief and rehabilitation.

Dawn, June 2, 2017

The United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) is constructing a ‘Humanitarian Response Facility’ (HRF) in Gilgit-Baltistan (GB) with $1.7 million provided by the Canadian government. This will be the seventh HRF built in Pakistan as part of a strategic network of storage facilities to help the government and humanitarian community prepare for and respond to disasters, the WFP announced on June 1. The WFP has been working with the National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA) and the Provincial Disaster Management Authorities (PDMA) to build the HRFs in strategic locations in most vulnerable parts of the country. The HRFs provide a central storage facility for government relief stocks to be rapidly deployed in emergencies. While the HRFs are designed and built by the WFP, the government provides land for construction and takes over its operation and maintenance. The WFP provides training to the government staff in technical areas such as warehouse management, facilities management and fire-fighting. Assistance from Canada comes in addition to over 4.4m Canadian dollars in contributions for the construction of six other HRFs located in Muzaffargarh, Quetta, Lahore, Hyderabad, Peshawar and Sukkur, jointly with five other donor countries.

Responding to the allegations made by the United Nations Human Rights Council chief that it was not giving access to a UN rights team to visit Pakistan administered Kashmir (PaK), Pakistan on June 8 stated that it was always ready to allow access to UNHRC team to the region.

“...we would clarify that Pakistan has expressed its readiness to allow the UN team sent by the High Commissioner to visit Azad Jammu and Kashmir together with the other part of Jammu and Kashmir under India.” Pakistan was responding to Zeid Ra’ad al-Hussein’s (UN high commissioner for human rights) address to the 35th session of UNHRC in Geneva on June 6 this year. Pakistan asserted that it is in sharp contrast to India’s outright denial of the request for access”. The representative of Pakistan in UNHRC informed the session that the Independent Permanent Human Rights Commission (IPHRC) had recently sent a fact finding mission to “Azad” Jammu and Kashmir. The Commission’s request for access of a fact finding mission to the Indian part of Kashmir was rejected, it noted.

“China tight-lipped on funding Pak’s dam as part of CPEC in PoK”

Business Standard, June 21, 2017

China again evaded responding to reports of Beijing’s offer to help Islamabad build a mega dam project in Gilgit-Baltistan, part of disputed Kashmir, and bring it under the umbrella of the controversial China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). “For this specific project and including the construction of dam you mentioned, I am not aware of the details,” Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesperson Geng Shuang stated. The installed capacity of the proposed project over the Indus River will be over 4,000 Mw. India has been dead against any construction in the Indus Basin in the disputed region through which the CPEC passes. On June 19, Pakistan’s Water and Power Development Authority Chairman Muzammil Hussain noted China had offered Pakistan help in building the Diamer-Bhasha dam project and integrate it with the $50 billion CPEC. The construction of the dam is pending for long as the World Bank and Asian Development Bank backed out of funding it, citing its location in disputed Gilgit-Baltistan, a part of Kashmir that is held by Pakistan and claimed by India. “What I can say is that the CPEC is a new cooperation framework for the two countries to achieve long-term development. This corridor will not only promote bilateral development of two countries but will also contribute to the development and prosperity in the region,” Geng stated. “We know that there is some concern about the corridor but we keep stressing that this economic corridor is just an economic initiative for cooperation,” he added.

“Beijing to fund dam project in Gilgit-Baltistan: Increasing presence of Chinese troops should worry India”

First Post, June 22, 2017

China offered to fund a long-pending Indus River dam project in the Gilgit-Baltistan region, which both the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank refused to touch. Islamabad did not want to seek a no-objection certificate from New Delhi for the project and two years ago, the World Bank refused to become a lender because of India’s objections. China and Pakistan are now mulling over making the Diamer-Bhasha Dam project a part of Beijing's China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). Iqbal, the Islamabad lead on CPEC, was quoted saying that a Chinese company from a Beijing-picked shortlist and a local partner would build the dam over a 10-year period, and work should begin in the "next financial year", which begins in July. "The Diamer-Bhasha Dam was first announced in 2006 and the foundation stone for it was laid in 2011. The dam is expected to generate 4,500 megawatts of electricity. This is a multi-purpose project, which will not only provide electricity and water for irrigation, but will also supply drinking water to Peshawar in addition to mitigating the danger of floods in Nowshera," Hussain, chairman of the Water and Power Development Authority, was quoted as saying. The Diamer-Basha reservoir will submerge some 104 km of the Karakoram Highway and displace about 30,000 people. "Thousands had their land snatched and occupied by the military authorities and their agencies. Under this black draconian rule, nobody can raise their voices against the CPEC," Wajahat Hasan, chairman of the Gilgit-Baltistan Thinkers Forum (GBTf) noted.
